BIO

Growing up, Ali Barter moved to different areas around the world with her family, including Papa New Guinea, Cairns, and Melbourne, where she was born. Having spent eight years singing in the Australian Girls Choir as a classical vocalist, her interest in music began at a young age.

When she was fourteen, she took a break from music and began drinking and partying too much. When her dad passed away unexpectedly when she was 24, she turned to music again, stating, “I finally had the feeling that if I didn’t start doing something now, then life would pass me by and I’d be a little shit bag forever.”

Barter later felt a sense of purpose and calmness, which enabled her to write “Hypercolour” for her debut EP. She went on to support Stevie Nicks, Vance Joy, Liz Phair, and more on their headlining tours. Now, two years later, she will be headlining a world tour upon releasing her second album Hello, I’m Doing My Best in October 2019.

The Best New Songs of the Week: Beyoncé, Wilco, Vivian Girls, and More

By Vulture Editors

Ali Barter, "Backseat"

Chick rock is a hard genre to nail. Veer towards the experimental and you risk turning off mainstream listeners. Too soft? Sellout. Australian singer-songwriter Ali Barter hits it just right on "Backseat," the first track released from her sophomore album Hello, I'm Doing My Best. In the "Backseat" music video, Barter plays the awkward cool girl (a subset of the "Cool Girl" trope) soliciting attention from a male guitar player. "I know that you play in bands" she screech-sings on repeat in high tones strapped to the beat of her electric guitar. Barter's take on affection, one that's clumsy, cute and a tad erinげy, brings back memories of first crushes and school dances. And like any good suburban love story, it begins and ends with a license; in the video's last scene, Barter and her beau sit side-by-side in her Triumph TR4 two-seater. —Corinne Osnos

JULY 9, 2015

Ali Barter is many things, she's a traveller, a questioner, an ethereal presence but most importantly she's a musician who defies genres. We had a chat to the singer about how travelling has shaped her music and her 'rat-bag' years.

Ali Barter's Girlie Bits hits all the right notes

By Craig Matheson
December 8, 2016 – 2.21pm

Girlie Bits, the anthemic new single from Melbourne singer-songwriter Ali Barter, is a catchy guitar kiss-off to male double standards that nails condescending misogyny. Barter wrote the song earlier this year, in an unexpected setting: in India at the end of her honeymoon.
